Professional experience

Felipe Romero has experience in infrastructure, public and administrative law litigation, and government enforcement. He has extensive experience in litigation, arbitration, and regulatory proceedings involving both national and transnational disputes.

His practice includes advising companies in regulated sectors such as energy, oil and gas, mining, telecommunications, food, and pharmaceuticals. He also has expertise in transactions involving the acquisition of public assets, public tenders, public-private partnerships, and project financing.

Felipe handles matters related to sanctioning law in both administrative and judicial spheres, including administrative accountability proceedings, public civil inquiries, and misconduct actions, with significant experience before authorities such as the Public Prosecutor's Office and Audit Courts. In addition, he has experience conducting internal corporate investigations and developing compliance programs.

Felipe also worked as an international visiting associate at Slaughter and May in London, in the disputes and investigations practice.
